

KEY FINDINGS

- 1. Black parents continue to be more comfortable with their children returning to in-person learning. However, their comfort levels still lag behind those of both White and Hispanic parents.
- 2. Black parents experienced a large increase in vaccine willingness for themselves this month. Although they remain split when thinking about vaccinating their own children, similar to White parents.
- School parents generally agree with positive statements about diversity and inclusivity when thinking about their schools. But Black parents are less likely than White or Hispanic parents to believe schools both treat all students equally and show respect for all student's beliefs.
- 4. Black parents' interest and participation in learning pods remained stable this month. Nearly one-third expressed interest or participation. Tutoring interest and participation declined by nine points (to 46%).
- 5. Both Black and Hispanic parents are more likely than White parents to prefer schooling take place at home in some capacity. Two-fifths of Black parents signaled they would like schooling at home three or more days per week after the pandemic.
- 6. Black parents continue to be much more likely to support education savings accounts (ESAs), public charter schools, and school vouchers than oppose them. A trend that has persisted throughout the first half of the year.

SURVEY PROFILE AND DEMOGRAPHICS

Black and Hispanic parents are more likely than White parents to prefer hybrid schooling, so that learning takes place at home in some capacity.

After the pandemic, if given the option, to what extent would you prefer schooling to be scheduled each week at home with a parent or tutor to provide the best education for your child?

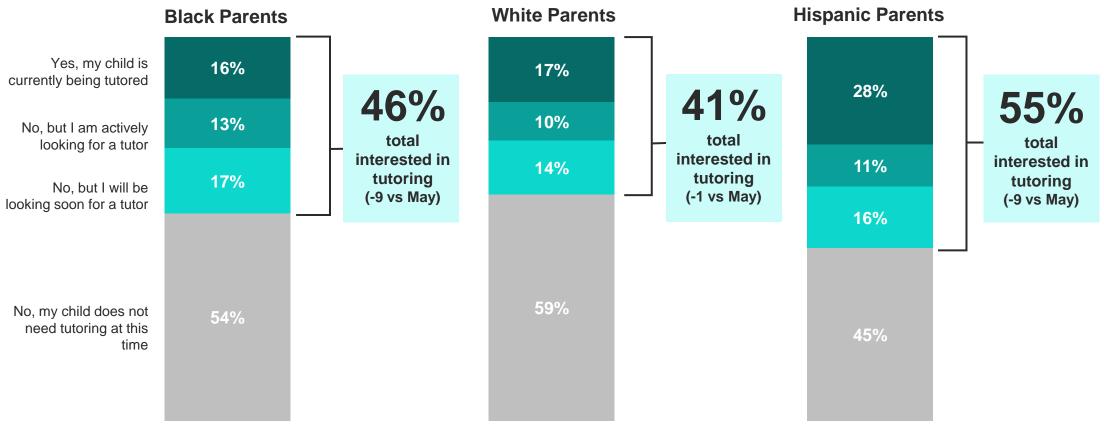

Roughly one-third of Black parents continue to say they are currently participating in or looking to form/join a learning pod.

As a result of the coronavirus pandemic, are you currently participating in a 'pod' with other families?

Interest and participation in tutoring decreased for both Black and Hispanic parents in June.

Is your child getting tutoring outside of regular school hours this school year?

Descriptions Used:

Charter Schools

Charter schools are public schools that have more control over their own budget, staff, and curriculum, and are exempt from many existing public school regulations.

School Vouchers

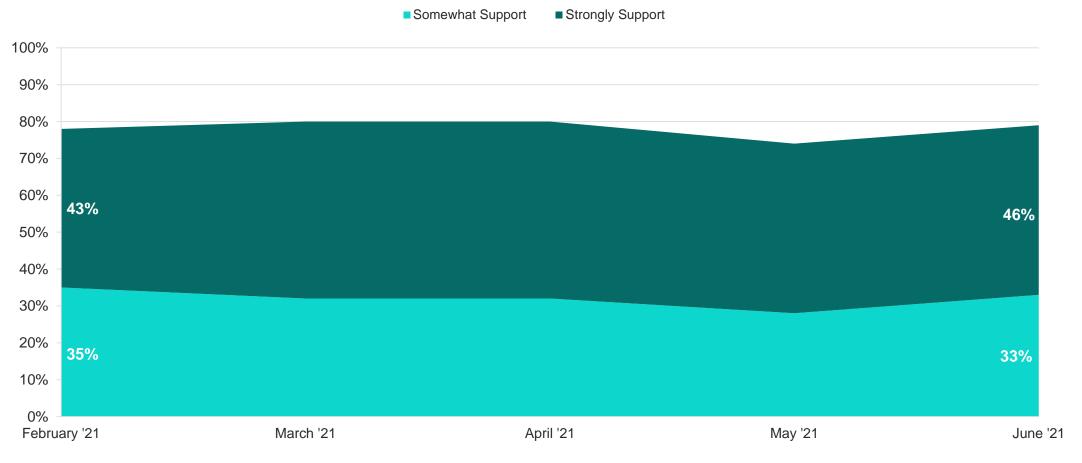

A school voucher system allows parents the option of sending their child to the school of their choice, whether that school is public or private, including both religious and non-religious schools. If this policy were adopted, tax dollars currently allocated to a school district would be allocated to parents in the form of a 'school voucher' to pay partial or full tuition for the child's school.

Education Savings Accounts

An "education savings account" in K–12 education – often called an ESA – establishes for parents a government-authorized savings account with restricted, but multiple uses for educational purposes. Parents can then use these funds to pay for: school tuition; tutoring; online education programs; therapies for students with special needs; textbooks or other instructional materials; or save for future college expenses.

Black parents continue to strongly support ESAs when given additional information. Almost half express strong support for this type of policy.
