Key Points

MORNING CONSULT

SLIDE / 2

COVID-19 is disrupting communities, schools, and routines. Parents, especially high school parents, feel prepared for a move to e-learning.

Americans' opinions on the direction of education have continued to climb since January.
 They trust teachers and principals to make good decisions about education. Trust in elected officials, while lower, has increased slightly.

Americans tend to think that per student spending and teacher salaries should increase.
 With kids at home and parents facilitating learning that opinion holds for teacher salaries even when provided with actual salary information.

School parents, especially high school parents, tend to be more favorable of school choice policies than non-parents but non-parent support increased when provided additional information.

Methodology (also see slides 39 - 40)

1

This poll was conducted from April 10 - 11, 2020, among a national sample of 2,200 adults. The interviews were conducted online and the data were weighted to approximate a target sample of adults based on age, race/ethnicity, gender, educational attainment, and region.

Support for school vouchers is lower but jumps once respondents are given a description. Independents' support increased the most.

Based on what you know, or have heard from others... In general, what is your opinion of 'school vouchers' in K–12 education?

A school voucher system allows parents the option of sending their child to the school of their choice, whether that school is public or private, including both religious and non-religious schools. If this policy were adopted, tax dollars currently allocated to a school district would be allocated to parents in the form of a 'school voucher' to pay partial or full tuition for the child's school. There are low levels of familiarity with ESAs, but support increases drastically when respondents are given a description.

Based on what you know, or have heard from others... In general, what is your opinion of 'education savings accounts' in K–12 education?

An "education savings account" in K-12 education – often called an ESA – establishes for parents a governmentauthorized savings account with restricted, but multiple uses for educational purposes. Parents can then use these funds to pay for: school tuition; tutoring; online education programs; therapies for students with special needs; textbooks or other instructional materials; or save for future college expenses.
